

Nature Remembers Motion

Nia dragged a ribbon on the floor.
The ribbon made a line.

The ball rolled away.
Nia watched it go.

The ball was over there.
The trail was still here.

This dot came before.
That dot came after.

Some dots were near.
Some dots were far.

Nia tapped the water.
Circles grew from the tap.

Mama clapped.
The room answered later.

Nia walked past the light.
The shadow walked too.

Nia turned around.
The new trail met the old trail.

Nia rolled the ball again.
The path made a pattern.

Some dots were loud.
Some dots were quiet.

It moved.
The world remembered.

Motion leaves a visible trail.

Before and after order a path.
